Beautiful Burial Grounds

three things in February

Thank you for opening our end of February newsletter containing three things we hope will be of interest.

Love your Burial Ground Week/Churches Count on Nature 2025 registration opening on 17th March

Love your Burial Ground Week/Churches Count on Nature 2025 will run from 7th to 15th June this year, and registration will start on 17th March.
Even if you have taken part before, do please register via the website so that your event can be added to the listing and map.
We are looking forward to another great year of history talks, picnics, bioblitzes, recording events and photography competitions!
The National Federation of Cemetery Friends will again be joining us as part of National Cemeteries Week

Keep an eye here to see the registration form go live

Love your Yew Week update

We were delighted with the response to our inaugural Love your Yew Week initiative, in partnership with the Ancient Yew Group.

It's not to late to send us your yew photographs at enquiries@cfga.org.uk, and if you didn't get the chance to deal with your ivy this time, don't forget that you can do it any time outside the bird nesting season.

To view our gallery of yew trees as well as other downloads and resources, click here

More veteran trees!

We all know how important yew trees are, but they are not the only veteran trees to be found in many churchyards and other burial grounds.

For an in depth look at the range of veteran trees, with sections as diverse as management, folklore and interpretation as well as a look at the question What is an ancient or veteran tree? why not download our Guide to Ancient and Veteran Trees.

REPLY TO US

Made with love in flodesk